—Austria Reported to Have Made New

Doing Little Toward Reducing Forts.

By Associated Press.
London, March 29.—Russia is again knocking at the back door of Constantinople, by bombarding the Turkish forts on the Bosphorus, but with what success is not yet definitely known.

Constantinople declines to accept reports of bad weather as an excuse for the lull in the attack, and claims that weather conditions have been too good that Turkish aeroplanes have been flying over allied warships in the Dardanelles.

Unofficial reports from neutral points indicate an early resumption of activity. They set forth that a long distance shelling of the inner defenses has been commenced by the battleships.

Reviewing Russian naval activity in the Baltic, Petrograd claims that the operations on this sea, of Russian warships have resulted in damage to several German units, and that the Germans have been compelled materially to restrict their movements.

London, March 29.—German troops in the north of Poland have returned to the attack centering their movements in the region of the Skwa river, near the Prussian border.

An official statement from Petrograd says that the Germans failed in an assault made with a division of infantry, and the Russians, advancing in turn, compelled their opponents at one point to abandon their first line trenches. The claim is made also that further to the south, on the Pilica river, German forces were put to flight.

The Petrograd version of the fighting in the Carpathians represents that victories have been won at several points, giving the Russians access to northern Hungary. So far as is known, however, no considerable movement in this direction has been inaugurated, and Vienna insists that the Austrians have gained successes in the mountain fighting.

Some of the Turkish forts at the Dardanelles were bombarded yesterday, by indirect fire from the Gulf of Saros, but the warships of the allied fleet did not attempt to enter the straits. Two French battleships, damaged in previous fighting, proved to have suffered so severely that, according to a Paris dispatch, they are to return to France and be put in dry dock.

Italy has decreed a strict censorship on military news, beginning March 31. A Paris newspaper published an unverified report that Austria has agreed to cede part of Trent to Italy at the close of the war, in return for Italy's neutrality.

NEW FIGHTER IN BALTIC FLEET

London, March 29.—A Reuters dispatch from Petrograd says that the Russian Baltic fleet has been reinforced by the addition of modern fighting units. Four new dreadnaughts, nearing completion when the war broke out, are believed to be now in the Baltic.

It is also thought that probably four other dreadnaughts, laid down in 1912, may be included in the Baltic fleet.

BRITISH STEAMER AGUILA SUNK

London, March 29.—The British steamer Aguilla was sunk by a German submarine this morning, off Bishop's rock. Her crew of 23 men was saved.

VON KLUCK IS INJURED

Berlin, via wireless to Sayville, L. I., March 29.—The report of the progress of the fighting issued from headquarters today, says that General von Kluck, the German commander who led the famous German rush into France in the early days of the war, has been slightly wounded by shrapnel fire, while inspecting advance positions of his army. His condition is satisfactory.

TURK DENIES ATROCITIES

Washington, March 29.—The Turkish government denies that there have been any disorders at Urumiah, Persia. Ambassador Morgenthau, at Constantinople, cabled the State Department today that the grand vizier has so informed him, on the strength of a report made to him by the Turkish War Office.

ALL IS QUIET BEFORE STORM

Brownsville, Texas, March 29.—There was no fighting at Matamoros today, up to this afternoon. Reports from both sides indicated that the battle between Villa besiegers and the Carranza garrison would not be renewed before tomorrow.

Fifteen flat cars of artillery for Villa, are said to be near the town today. It is rumored that the Carranza garrison hasn't a single piece of artillery, it being asserted that the guns were captured in a recent battle.

Reports say that the Carranza garrison is about to receive strong reinforcements. The Villa troops lost heavily in the attack on the town yesterday.

NO HOPE FOR CREW OF F-4

Washington, March 29.—The last remote hope that any of the submarine F-4's crew might be alive, has been abandoned by the Navy Department, and today Acting Secretary Blue ordered Rear Admiral Moore, commanding the Honolulu naval station, to report the exact location of the sunken boat, and the depth at which she lies, that the department may estimate the probability of salvaging the hull and recovering the bodies of her commander and crew.

TO EVACUATE MEXICO CITY

By Associated Press.
Washington, March 29.—Dispatches received in diplomatic quarters here today from Mexico City said it was understood there that General Obregon, with Carranza forces, was returning to the capital, and that Zapata forces were about to evacuate.

FALABA WAS TORPEDOED

By Associated Press.
London, March 29.—The report of yesterday, that the British steamer Falaba had been sunk by a German submarine, was confirmed today.

The Falaba was sent to the bottom yesterday afternoon, off an inlet on the coast of South Wales. The loss of life probably was heavy. The Falaba was much larger than most of the British merchantmen sunk by German submarines. She was engaged in the African service.

The Falaba left Liverpool Saturday for the west coast of Africa with 140 passengers, and with a crew of 120 men. Her officers state that when the German submarine appeared it whistled twice, as a signal for the steamer to prepare her life boats, but that before this could be done a torpedo struck the ship near the engine room.

Three of the Falaba's lifeboats were swamped. Many persons aboard the vessel were thrown into the sea, where they struggled while the submarine circled about, offering, according to stories told by those rescued, no assistance.

A fishing boat saved 140 of the passengers and crew. The survivors say that the steamer was chased for half an hour by the submarine before she was caught.

FOLLOWS HUSBAND TO GREAT BEYOND

Mrs. Violette Houseman, an aged resident of Octa, died Monday morning at seven o'clock, following an illness of several weeks duration.

A few days ago her husband, William Houseman, passed away, and was buried Saturday. The death of her husband was a shock from which the aged woman did not rally, and death relieved her of her sufferings, Monday morning.

E. A. ELLIES BUYS MARKET ST. PROPERTY

Mr. E. A. Ellies has purchased the double residence property immediately east of the livery barn, corner Market and Hinde streets, and will move from his present location on East Paint street to the West Market street property, in the near future.

ASSESSORS ORDERED TO PREPARE FOR WORK

By Associated Press.
Columbus, March 29.—Orders to district tax assessors were being prepared in the State Tax Commission offices today, asking that meetings of all deputy district assessors who work in wards and townships be called for next Saturday.

Officially no attention was paid by the tax commission to the prospective fate of the Beidler taxation bill, which will come up for final consideration of conference committee report in both houses of the legislature tomorrow.

Neither has the tax commission given any heed to reports that arrangements have been made by the Democratic state organization for wholesale resignation of all Democratic district tax assessors, for the sake of embarrassing the Republican administration.

The governor's office still was much concerned, however, by what were termed "authentic reports" that scores of district assessors and ward and township assessors had prepared their resignation papers and that these will be held until the latter part of the week.

"APOSTLE" STILL HELD IN JAIL

Alliance, O., March 29.—Although authorities had determined to release "Apostle" Percy A. George, the guiding light of the church of the Kingdom of God cult, held under suspicion in connection with the death of Amy Tanner, a resident of the cult house, instructions today from the coroner caused a change of plans.

The coroner said this morning that he is determined that George must be held, pending the result of the chemical analysis of tissue from the stomach of Amy Tanner.

The coroner also instructed the chief of police to subpoena Mrs. P. A. George, known as the "spirit bride." She will be asked to tell what she knows about the cult house and the conduct within it.

GERMAN ROVER MUST ACT

Newport News, Va., March 29.—The German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich still lays at her dock here this afternoon, but activities all around her convinced local authorities that some definite step would soon be taken, either to intern the raider or send her out.

The report was still current that her commander was ready to go, but was waiting for definite assurance that the United States would protect him to the three mile limit, from hostile cruisers which have been off the Virginia capes.

There is a well defined report that the Eitel's time limit for repairs expires in 48 hours.

The large block electric sign, bearing advertisements of various Washington merchants, which has occupied a position on the wall of the Passmore building for several years, was taken down Monday.

TANZER GIRL DECIDES SHE WAS MISTAKEN

By Associated Press.

New York, March 29.—Miss Rae Tanzer, the diminutive milliner who filed a $50,000 damage suit against James W. Osborne, former assistant district attorney of New York, went on the arm of a new lawyer today to the office of the United States District Attorney, and took back everything she said recently, identifying Mr. Osborne as the man who courted her under the name of Oliver Osborne.

Before the district attorney would take her statement, he prepared a waiver of immunity for her to sign. Her attorney said that the firm of Slade & Slade, the lawyers who had represented her, were in no way involved, but that Miss Tanzer has simply made a mistake in identifying James W. Osborne as Oliver Osborne.

GERMANS MAKE SOME PROGRESS

London, March 29.—A new German offensive in Poland has led to sharp fighting, in which Russians are said in Berlin to have suffered heavy losses.

The War Office announces that Tauraggen, in Russia, across the East Prussian frontier, was stormed successfully.

HORSEMEN TO SETTLE DIFFICULTY IN COURT

WARSHIPS TO PATROL VA. CAPES

Philadelphia, March 29.—The battleship Alabama left the navy yard early this morning for Hampton Roads, where she will take up patrol duty in connection with the imminent departure of the German cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich. Captain T. A. Lyons of the Alabama and Rear Admiral James Helm, commanding the Atlantic reserve fleet at the navy yard, will be on board during the patrol service.

While officials at Washington are still of the opinion that the German cruiser will eventually interne rather than face British cruisers waiting for her outside the Virginia capes, every precaution is being taken as if it were a certainty that the Eitel will venture out. It is believed also that neither the German vessel nor the British warships will fail to observe all the neutrality of the United States, but it was felt that precautionary measures should be adopted to care for any contingency when the time allowed the Eitel has expired and the vessel must leave Newport News and the jurisdiction of the United States within twenty-four hours or else interne for the war.

This departure will be conditional, however, on whether a merchantman of enemy nationality has left Newport News within the previous twenty-four hours. If a British or a French ship has gone out a few hours previously, the German cruiser must wait until twenty-four hours have elapsed before going to sea in her wake. United States authorities at Newport News will decide when these circumstances make it proper for the Eitel to depart and the Alabama will be used to prevent the German vessel from proceeding out to sea before permission has been given her by this government. In view of the large number of British ships clearing from Newport News and Norfolk it is thought probable the Eitel may be delayed some time when she announces her desire to go to sea.

Eitel May Go to New York.

Newport News, Va., March 29.—Reports that the Prinz Eitel Friedrich would be towed to New York within the three mile limit are current here, following the arrival of a big sea-going tug equipped with wireless, which tied up to a shipyard pier close to the German cruiser. Marine men said that this would be possible in view of the fact that the Eitel is now drawing less than thirteen feet of water. The rumor was given credence in view of the report in the request to Washington for protection within the three mile limit.

DREDGING CHAINS HELD BY ANCHOR

Honolulu, March 29.—Great disappointment was felt here when the announcement was made that the searchers for the missing submarine F-4 had thus far failed to locate her, in spite of previous statements she had been found and partly raised. The truth of the situation was revealed by Elver Agraz of the submarine service, who went down 215 feet only to find that the dredging hook was fast to a discarded anchor and not to the lost boat, as had been believed for two days.

As a result the search has been renewed, with the hope that the hull of the unfortunate boat will soon be located. This hope is chiefly inspired by the fact that the searchers in the vicinity of the spot where it is believed the F-4 lies brought up a section of her periscope. In addition to this, oil and bubbles continue to float to the surface. So far as the crew is concerned, all hope of finding any of the members alive has been abandoned absolutely.

SEINERS KILLED IN REVOLVER BATTLE

Cincinnati, March 29.—Charles Faber, who was shot in a revolver battle with Louis Kuertz, chief deputy game warden, and his deputy, David Ferris, on the banks of the Little Miami river, near Milford, died from his wounds. Tip Lemmon, a companion of Faber, was shot and almost instantly killed, while Edward Kleinfelter, the third man in the party, was also struck by a bullet and is in a serious condition at the city hospital. Kuertz was slightly wounded in the hand.

According to Kuertz, the two dead men and Kleinfelter were seining with a trammel net, which is in violation of the law, and when the game wardens attempted to place them under arrest they resisted.

Washington, March 29.—Reports received at the state department and at the Carranza agency here indicate that Villa forces were defeated in at least the early stages of the battle for possession of Matamoros.

The Carranza agency's dispatch stated that the Villistas lost 900 men in their attacks on the trenches of the Carranza troops defending the city. The Villistas were mowed down by machine guns in three separate charges, it is said. A large number of the Villa troops are said to have abandoned their camp after this fighting while their wounded fled to the American side. The Carranza forces suffered only very slight losses, it is claimed, not having been required to move from the protection of the trenches.

That there has been some severe fighting outside Matamoros was shown by reports received at Red Cross headquarters. Four hundred wounded Mexicans have been already brought across the international bridge into Brownsville, Tex., and are being cared for there. S. P. Morris, acting national director of the Red Cross, ordered four Red Cross nurses in northern states to proceed at once to Brownsville.

VILLA WILL TAKE PERSONAL COMMAND

El Paso, Tex., March 29.—With the report that General Villa, en route from Monterey, was expected today to take personal command of the troops before Matamoros, advices reached the Villa agency here that automobile trains are being rushed from the Monterey base to Matamoros. Shipments of ammunition from the east are to be deposited at McAllen, Tex., for exportation to the Villa troops.

COL. WILLIAM JAY FOUND DEAD IN BED

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., March 29.—Colonel William Jay of New York was found dead in bed in his apartments in the Greenbrier hotel here. The cause of death was heart failure, from which he had been suffering for some time. The body was discovered by Mrs. Jay.

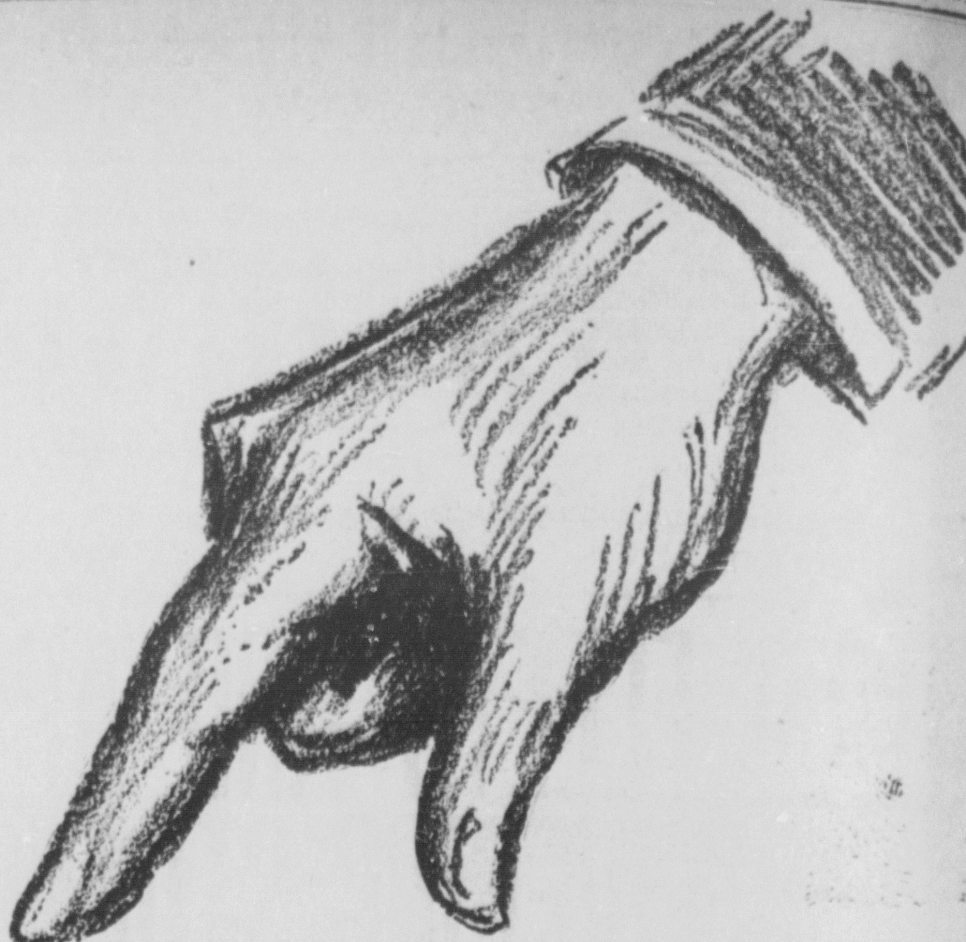

Colonel William Jay was a great-grandson of the celebrated John Jay, first chief justice of the United States, and the son of John Jay, one time United States minister to Austria, and of Eleanor Kingsland Field. He was born in New York on Feb. 12, 1841.

GERMAN BODIES CHOKED TRENCHES

Chalons Sur Marne, France, March 29.—Eleven thousands German dead have been taken from the trenches won by the French during twenty days of fighting in the Champagne country. The German losses in killed, prisoners and in wounded are estimated by the French military authorities at 50,000.

The German wastage, they say, has been two to one compared with the French losses, because the Germans would try to regain lost ground by counter attacks, repeated again and again with obstinate courage.

Hereafter the basis of adjustment will be:

In Ford sizes, plain tread, 6,000 miles; Kant Slip, 7,500 miles. All other sizes, plain tread, 5,000 miles; Kant Slip tread, 6,000 miles.

The word "adjust" is merely figurative, because in 1914 the total adjustment in Kelly-Springfield Tires for the whole United States was less than 1%. You get this unequalled service in uninterrupted mileage—not adjustment.

"TIPPERARY" IS BLAMED

Columbus, March 29.—Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Meehan of this city received word from the adjutant general of Canada that their son, James Meehan, had been killed March 20 in the French trenches, where he was fighting as a private in Princess Patricia's regiment. Young Meehan left Columbus a year ago to work in a bolt factory in Nova Scotia, and there caught the war fever and enlisted with the Canadian contingent.

"The catching tune of 'Tipperary,' those bands playing through the streets to stir the blood of youngsters and the boy's desire of years to experience the adventures of warfare—I guess that's what made him go to help the British," said the slain soldier's father. "He wasn't fighting for his own country, for he was an American—born right here in Columbus. But he caught the war spirit, and taught the allies' cause was his own, and so he went off—and got killed."

Italy And The War

Reports from Italy, while somewhat conflicting in details and conclusions, nevertheless, taken as a whole, warrant the belief that that government is going forward as rapidly as possible, with its preparations to enter the great European war.

While the army which Italy would, in the event she enters the war, add to the forces of the allies are not numerically strong and while the equipment, in the way of heavy artillery and siege guns, would not markedly increase the offensive force of England, France and Russia, yet with Italy striking at Austria from the southwest it will necessitate a division of the force which the dual monarchy has now in the field and result in Austria Hungary being harassed on both borders just as Germany is now.

To add to the burdens of despairing Austria-Hungary the necessity of rushing troops back and forth to meet attacks of two enemies cannot fail to add to the discouragement of the Austrian government and increase and intensify the desire of the Austrian people to break away from the alliance with Germany and sue for peace on their own account.

It is that possible result, rather than because of any increase in the fighting force of the allies which may make of Italy's entrance into the war an act decisive of the great conflict.

Action Fraught With Danger

Men well versed in international law and the rights of neutral nations, in times of war, on the high seas are now calling attention to the danger of establishing a precedent by the allowance of the extensive danger zones claimed by Great Britain and Germany.

Both of these nations have undertaken to assume control and mastery of the seas outside of that national zone lying close to the shores of the nation involved in war.

It is pointed out that the seas belong alike to all the nations of the earth and all nations, either in times of war or peace, are entitled to traverse those seas in carrying on their commerce, free from molestation by any other nation. So far as neutral nations are concerned, the fact that a state of war exists between two or more nations, does not in any way abridge that neutral's right.

The most forceful adjudication on that point and one which established that right in nations by international court decree was entered in eighteen ninety-four.

The decree was the summing up of a controversy between the United States and Great Britain which grew out of the claim of this nation that the sea, outside of the three mile limit in the Behring Sea should be closed to Canadian Sealers. Great Britain bitterly opposed the claim and advocated the freedom of the seas for all nations. The arbitration court at Paris upheld the claim of Great Britain and established the freedom of the sea in accord with custom which had endured since man first sailed the seas.

It is strange that after establishing this principle insuring the freedom of the seas, Great Britain should violate that decree, obtained on her selection, before scarcely more than a decade had passed.

The notice that the North Sea and other portions of the waterways of the world would be mined and forbidden for the use of neutral nations for the purpose of commerce and trade was a flagrant violation of the rights of neutral nations, it is now pointed out with much force.

If neutral nations can be denied the privileges of the high seas in times of war why not in times of peace?

The right of Germany and Great Britain to assume, so far as neutral nations are concerned, jurisdiction of the high seas is not dependent on war. If the right exists at all it exists in times of peace, and may be assumed in times of peace with as much warrant, in the law of nations, as in times of war.

Every neutral nation on earth faces danger of loss or injury to her commercial rights by allowing this assumption of jurisdiction of the high seas by Germany and England to go unopposed. To permit the warring nations to appropriate, even in times of war, the great waterways of the world, and to allow their claim of right to develop, unopposed, into a title equivalent to ownership, would be disastrous to commercial pursuits to that degree which would warrant a fear that it would become, ere long, the cause of another great world war.

Our vigorous protests against such action should be lodged at once and in such manner as to insure a prompt and proper adjustment as soon as peace is restored.

Poetry For Today

THE MEADOW LARK.
Meadow lark, your liquid trilling
Sets my languid pulses thrilling.
For the long years seem to vanish
When you sing:
Once again a child I'm playing
In the fields and wood I'm straying,
Where I learned the joyful secrets
Of the spring.

When your first song greets my hearing,
Well I know the time is nearing
When the wild plum fills the dell
With fragrance rare;
When the redbud lights its tapers,
And the winter's chilling vapors
Are dispersed in springtime's soft
And balmy air.

Near a long-loved, humble dwelling
Dainty maple buds are swelling,
And the iris blooms beside the garden wall;
Robins twitter, all contented,
In the orchard, blossom-scented,
And the turtle dove repeats his plaintive call.

Meadow lark, you sing of faces
Gone from those familiar places,
Some remaining but a sweet and tender dream;
But a nest is in the grasses,
Where no careless footstep passes,
And the violets are blooming by the stream.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sorrowful complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Every man has a yellow streak, but some of us manage to conceal it better than others.

When a newly married woman discovers that by following the directions in a cookbook she can produce a perfectly good mess of concrete she begins to place less faith in the gas range and more faith in the can opener.

What has become of the old fashioned milkman who used to ring a bell? A woman may forget to take any money with her when she goes shopping, but she never forgets to make sure that she has a mirror in her hand-bag.

A princess can lug around a muff that is about the size of a young mattress, but her arms are always too weak to help mother wipe the dishes.

The girl who reads a few pages of "Gwendolyn's Sacrifice" or "Harold Mainwaring's Perfidy" every time she gets on a street car usually pities the poor lowbrows who haven't her literary temperament.

Every now and then you meet a man who wears a No. 8 hat and whose brain would just about fill a thimble.

Another grand feature about living in this country is that you can always blame your troubles on the administration.

The lad who bets on the theory that "it is a good bet if I lose" usually loses.

A woman just loves to be consistent. She will spend the whole day praising her husband to the neighbors, and then as soon as her husband gets home she will start in knocking him.

A man will accept anything else that he needs, but he usually draws the line on advice.

For the first two weeks lovey will stay home every night with honey and seek to enjoy it. But about the third week he will begin to squirm around and yawn every night after supper, and he will finally brace up enough courage to tell honey that he will run downtown for a few minutes to attend to a little matter. And when he gets home about midnight he discovers that the honeymoon has tied a big rock around its neck and jumped into the river.

The man who brags about his small feet is wasting time. He should be bragging about his small head.

When a man has something that he can't sell and can't even give away he can always raffle it off.

The old fashioned man, who used to make the grocer put a potato on the spout of the oil can so he could carry it home without spilling any of it, now has a son who kicks about his gas and electric light bills.

If the militant suffs want to be men as much as they claim they do why do not some of them come out with testimonials for their favorite shaving soaps?

GOV. WILLIS URGES SPEED

Columbus, March 29. — Governor Willis has urged Republican members of the legislature not to yield to any obstacles which are not insurmountable in the redemption at the earliest time possible of the party pledge to decentralize the tax system.

The Beltier bill conference report will be made tonight, and a two-thirds vote will be asked on the adoption of the report. There is no real expectation that the necessary two-thirds will be obtained in the senate. If not obtained, the administration at least will be able to say it did all it could to put this pledged decentralization into immediate effect.

In expectation of the defeat of the Beltier bill, amendments will be made to the permanent decentralizer, the Parrett-Whittemore bill, in order to make it workable in case a referendum petition makes impossible the election this fall of ward and township assessors. If this bill is subjected to a referendum vote at the November election, the elective assessors it provides for can not be elected the same day the law itself is up for approval or rejection, and can not be elected until 1916.

The bill now carries provision for the county auditor to appoint assistant assessors and to fill vacancies in elective assessorships caused by removal or resignation. But amendment will be needed to empower the auditor to appoint assessors in case their election is rendered impossible this fall. Submission of the bill to referendum, even if the people sustain it, would prevent the Willis administration's carrying out its pledges to give the people elective local assessors until after the date when the administration itself will be up for approval or rejection, namely, in November, 1916.

PANCOASTBURG MAN TELLS STORY OF DARING HOLD-UP

FRANK PIATT, OF EASTERN FAYETTE, CLAIMS HIGHWAYMEN HELD HIM UP IN CIRCLEVILLE IN BROAD DAYLIGHT AND RELIEVED HIM OF $315 — EXHIBITS LONG CUT IN COAT WHICH HE SAYS WAS INFLICTED BY KNIFE IN HANDS OF HIGHWAYMAN.

Frank Piatt, hailing from Pancostburg, or Waterloo, on the banks of placid Deer Creek, created a genuine sensation in Circleville, early Saturday morning, by declaring that he had been held up and robbed of $315, and that the highwaymen, whom he claims attacked him in broad daylight, tried to kill him by slashing at him with a knife, cutting his coat over his heart, but not injuring Piatt.

After Piatt had complained to the police a careful investigation was made, they declared that Piatt's story sounded decidedly unlikely, as not a particle of evidence could be uncovered to substantiate the man's lurid story.

In connection with the man's story, the Circleville Herald says in part:

"Piatt claims he arrived here in company with two men named Shaw from his neighborhood on the N. &

W. train from Portsmouth, where they had sold three horses; that they left their saddles and bridles at the depot and came up street to get their breakfast; that he went back to the depot to see if the saddles were safe and that while there the three men approached him to see if he wanted to buy a horse; on informing them that he would and would pay cash for it if it was a good one, that he, in company with the three men started to look at the horse and when they had proceeded as far as Corwin street, the three men attacked him; that he knocked two of them down and that the third grabbed him from behind and took $315 from his roll of $350 and ran.

"As an evidence of the alleged assault the skin was knocked from the knuckles of Piatt's right hand and there was a cut in the right side of his coat, that did not penetrate his body.

"Against the request of Chief Myers Piatt took the 8:30 train for New Holland.

"It isn't likely that a holdup could have occurred in that particular vicinity without some one seeing or hearing it and the fact that Piatt was not willing to remain in the city to assist the police in locating the thieves (?) makes his story look rather fishy to say the least."

The words of Dr. Fess proved an inspiration to all who heard him, and created additional interest in Bible study, Sunday school and church work generally.

JOHN SANDERS IN THE TOILS

POLICE RAID HOME IN GAS HOUSE REGION AND HOLD JOHN SANDERS ON CHARGE OF GAMBLING—SANDERS PLEADS NOT GUILTY—WILL PROBABLY BE SENT TO WORKHOUSE ON OLD SENTENCE.

Chief of Police Moore and Officer Baughn raided the home of John Sanders, colored, in the Gas House region Sunday afternoon, and arrested Sanders on a charge of gambling. He was lodged in jail and pleaded not guilty before Mayor Coffey Monday morning. It is expected that the court will be satisfied to let Sanders work out an old six months' sentence which has been hanging over him since the wholesale bootlegging raids of the police a year ago.

No actual evidence remained at the Sanders home when the police arrived. If a game had been in progress, it was evident that someone had tipped off the offenders, and not a moment too soon neither, for, as the police describe it, Sanders' guests — of whom there were several — bolted from all exits of the house "like a bunch of sheep," as the police arrived. No effort was made to take any of the men save Sanders himself.

Sanders disclaims having had a game going, but admits that his guests had been drinking.

534 MEN ATTEND VARIOUS BIBLE CLASSES YESTERDAY

NEW RECORD ESTABLISHED IS EXPECTED TO BE SURPASSED EASTER SUNDAY WHEN MORE THAN 600 MEN WILL, IN ALL PROBABILITY, BE ENROLLED IN FOUR BIBLE CLASSES.

The total attendance of the Men's Bible classes of the Baptist, Grace M. E., Presbyterian and Christian churches in this city Sunday morning was 534, or more than 150 greater than the previous Sunday. And at the present time each class is working for an attendance Easter Sunday that will exceed 600 men.

At the First Presbyterian church 243 men assembled to hear Congressman S. D. Fess deliver a very forceful address on Sunday School and Church Work, and all were greatly pleased with the message delivered by the well known student. Another large attendance next Sunday is anticipated.

The Men's Class of Grace M. E. church had 186 men enrolled, and the teacher, Rev. F. E. Ross, presented his topic "Is the Bible an Inspired Book" in a manner intensely interesting, helpful and instructive. An attendance of 250 is anticipated for next Sunday.

At the Baptist church the attendance in the Men's class was 50, and the Christian church men's class had 55 enrolled. In both classes the teachers held the close interest of the men in presenting the lesson to the benefit of all.

Easter usually brings a large attendance in all of the churches, and next Sunday in addition to each Bible class having a large attendance, each Sunday school is expected to reach near or surpass all previous records.

The go-to-Sunday school movement in Washington is similar to that which is developing in a great many neighboring towns and cities, and in some cities smaller than this the attendance is exceeding the local attendance, and establishing new precedents.

HON. S. D. FESS ADDRESSES MEN

WELL KNOWN BIBLE STUDENT OF ANTIOCH COLLEGE DELIVERS INSPIRING ADDRESS BEFORE 243 MEN YESTERDAY MORNING — HURRIED FROM THIS CITY TO SPRINGFIELD WHERE HE ADDRESSED ANOTHER BODY OF MEN.

Sunday was a busy day for Congressman S. D. Fess, who addressed a large audience of men at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning, after coming to this city in an automobile, and following his address here he was whirled away to Springfield where he addressed another large class of men in one of the churches of that city.

Dr. Fess, always a strong speaker, being a careful Bible student and in close touch with church work generally, spoke for nearly one hour while before the men at the Presbyterian church, his address dealing with bible study, church and Sunday school work, and man's duty toward himself, his fellow men and his God.

Dr. Fess praised the spirit of attending Sunday school which is manifesting itself in this city among the men, as never before, and which, he said, was a movement which is gaining ground all over the United States and bids fair to work wonders in the future of the American nation. CHAPTER I.

NED WARNER, in front of the blazing windows of the New York cafe, stood as one in a daze, deaf to all the words of Bobbie and Iris blithering, who feared, from the ashen pallor of his face, that his murderous frenzy might react upon himself. He saw again his lovely runaway bride being forced out of the cafe against her will by the man with the white mustache and that infernal scoundrel with the black Vandyke. Gilbert Blye! He saw himself prevented by the frightened Bobbie and Iris and the solicitous waiters from dashing among the glittering tables and grappling Blye by the throat and strangling him to death. He saw himself rushing to the ornate entrance through which they had taken his beautiful June and arriving in time only to see her whirl away into the night in Blye's luxurious limousine, the heavy man with the thick eyelids up in front with the driver, the middle aged woman and the vivacious brunette with concern and fright on their pale faces as the dome light of the car shone down upon them, and on the rear seat with June the two men who had carried her away by violence, the white mustached man laughing, and the dark, handsome face of Gilbert Blye bending over June with that suave smile on his lips.

Too late! Too late for anything but his stupor. The limousine had turned the corner. On that side of the cafe there was not a taxi to be seen. Bobbie's car stood in front, on the other street. While Iris endeavored to arouse the stupefied Ned, Bobbie ran around and brought his roadster. They drove up to the corner and turned down the street through which the limousine had disappeared, but where in all that wilderness of moving vehicles could the track of June be found? Nowhere! It was as if the earth had opened and swallowed her up.

It might as well, for June, in a swift motorboat with the gay party which had kidnapped her from the cafe, was then swiftly approaching a long, low yacht which loomed gracefully above them in the misty river.

June's struggles were useless in that heaving water, and her cries of protest went unheard in that lonely waste. Strong arms lifted her to her feet. A strong hand from above grasp-music, pounded out by the nimble fingers of Tommy Thomas.

Blye sat quietly, with that suave smile upon his lips and stroking his black Vandyke with his long, lean, white fingers, upon one of which sparkled a diamond. He rose presently, and, tiptoeing down the gangway, stopped at June's door and listened. He could hear an occasional stifled sob as June sat amid the soft cushions of the couch. Before her, through a half open door, could be seen a glimpse of a snowy white bathroom, and in the adjoining little pale blue boudoir stood June's own luggage!

Ned! That brief sight of him had filled June's whole soul with longing. Poor little runaway bride!

There were the rattle of a donkey engine and the scraping of chains on the yacht Hilarity. The anchor was coming up, and there was an instant change in the easy rocking of the craft. She shuddered, and then there was the sound of seething water as the Hilarity gathered headway. June was on her feet in an instant. She ran to the porthole and gazed out at the barely moving lights along shore. The portholes were too small to let her shoulders through. She ran to the door and opened it stealthily, then closed it and held the knob as Tommy Thomas and Orin Cunningham danced past in the salon.

The alert ear of Gilbert Blye caught the click of that latch, slight as it was, and his eyes glowed; he motioned significantly toward the corridor, and Edwards, reaching up, said something in the ear of Mrs. Villard. A slight frown crossed her brow, but she rose instantly and went down the gangway to the door of June's stateroom. She knocked, but there was no answer. "June!" she called. "June, dear!" No answer. Mrs. Villard listened. No sound. She went back slowly to the salon.

"You'll never make that child one of us," and she shook her head.

June sat on the couch in her stateroom with her hands locked upon her knees, staring into the white slice of brightness formed by the tiling of the bathroom, and while she pondered on what she should do Marie and Henri reached the city and stopped at a telephone office. When they came out of that place a short, wide, thick man who had been waddling down the street, with a blunt stub of a cigar in one corner of his mouth and a look of habitual fortiveness in his little eyes, started abruptly at sight of Marie, and when the touring car started the short, wide man hung on behind, his cigar stub firmly clamped between his teeth.

The doorbell rang at the Moore home in Brynport. Stern John Moore, reading his paper beneath the portrait of June, looked up quickly, and there was a slight tremor at the corner of his paper. Aunt Debby's voice was heard: "Why, it's Mr. Ned and Miss Iris. Why, good evenin'! The folks is to home."

Stern John Moore listened with silent attention while Mrs. Moore, her hand upon her breast, stifled the emotions to which Iris Blithering gave full play as the "kidnaping" was described.

There was but one conclusion among the men, and Ned, composing his voice as he passed from the mention of Blye, stated that conclusion.

"It is a matter for the police," he declared.

"It is a matter for the police," he declared and picked up the telephone. "Our daughter is in danger," said the grave voice of John Moore.

CHAPTER II.

IN the dock adjacent to the one from which the Hilarity's motor tender had departed there paced, almost perceptibly, a night watchman, who consisted of an overcoat, a cap and two glints of eye. To him there came, as the docks intensified their loneliness, a brisk little chauffeur with a thin mustache and a woman with high cheek bones.

"The Hilarity!" stated the little chauffeur, with an accusing tone, and with a sweeping gesture he pointed to that adjacent dock where stood a big hamper with the word "Hilarity" glaring white on its side. "She is gone!" Then Henri stepped back.

"Yep," rumbled a frosty voice.

"But her tender," objected Henri, "also is gone. Listen, my friend," insisted Henri, stopping in front of the overcoat and cap, but moving aside as it came irresistibly on. "The facts are like these: Mademoiselle has gone on board the Hilarity. Behold, here is the maid of the charming mademoiselle. She was also to have gone on board the Hilarity. How, then, shall she go?"

"Dunno."

The maid of the charming mademoiselle now stepped forward.

"Can you drive a motorboat?" she asked.

"Voila!" And Henri snapped the fingers of both hands, snapped them three times. "Voila, mademoiselle, Marie! If it goes I can drive it."

"Can't we hire this boat?" and the resourceful Marie pointed to a trim little craft.

"Nope."

"But, comrade," And Henri jerked his cap on the back of his head as he wheeled at right angles.

"It is important. Look. Here is money. I take the swift little boat. I swish out of the slip. I swish down the river. I swish across the bay. Like lightning I swish, and I overtake the yacht Hilarity. I deliver the charming maid—a little bow here—and a kiss from the finger tips to the charming mademoiselle, and immediately I swish back. Nothing is lost! All is safe!"

"Get off the dock," came the answer.

"But, monsieur."

"Hike."

"I, Henri, detest you," was the angry response. And he followed Marie off the dock.

Henri had another idea. He drove to a nearby saloon and procured a bottle of whisky, which he offered to the man on the dock.

Mrs. Moore Stifled the Emotions to Which Iris Blithering Gave Full Play.

"Thanks," The voice was one degree less frosty. The neck of the bottle disappeared into the slit of the overcoat collar, and the gleaming bottle turned heavenward.

"Voila," Henri himself took a sip and stuffed the bottle in his pocket. "I shall go away, my friend, but I shall return." He hurried back to the touring car up on the street and drove away, and the thick figure slinking out of the shadows hopped on behind.

In the ivory tapestried stateroom, as the Hilarity steamed slowly across the bay, June Warner suddenly rose and rang for the stewardess. That puckered person came with alacrity, but before she went to June she stopped in the door of the crimson and gold salon and, catching the eye of Orin Cunningham, bobbed her head and smiled her ingratiating smile and jerked her thumb over her shoulder toward June's room; then she turned her pallid eyes toward Gilbert Blye for a fleeting moment and hurried away.

"Did you ring, dearie?" she whined as June opened the door.

"Yes," June studied the woman a moment speculatively. She could not confide in this creature. "You may bring me some water, please."

"Yes, dearie." The stewardess whirled and hurried to the door of the crimson and gold salon, where Tommy Thomas sat between Cunningham and Edwards, with a hand on a shoulder of each. The stewardess, with a side-long glance at the quiet Blye in the corner, hurried over to the group on the bench.

"She wants some water," she whispered, bending over and grinning her ugly grin.

"Oh, yes." Again the grin. "Young ladies always trust me. Say, I think she wants to escape."

Blye, with a frown on his dark, handsome face, walked across and spoke to Cunningham. Orin nodded, and his eyes twinkling, went to the portable buffet, where he selected a long stemmed, gracefully shaped, gold incrustated goblet of Venetian glass. He filled it with ice and set it to one side. Then, while the others watched him, Tommy Thomas, with a half sneer, and Mrs. Villard, with shocked concern, he took from a locked case a tiny stone bottle. Now he emptied the ice from the beautiful goblet and poured into it a few blood red drops. Mrs. Villard half rose and looked toward Gilbert Blye; then, with a catch in her breath, she sat down and was silent.

Blye went to the door as the stewardess came up the gangway and called her in with a jerk of his head. On the lips of Edwards there had come a firm set, and his heavy lidded eyes had narrowed. Without a word Cunningham handed the glass to the stewardess, but between the two there passed a look which was full of meaning. Blye, with his glowing eyes on the glass, smiled suavely.

"I brought you the water, dearie," said the stewardess, entering June's stateroom.

"Oh!" An exclamation of delight from June as her eyes widened with the beauty of the delicate Venetian goblet.

"That's something else I made for you in the pantry, dearie," explained the stewardess, in her coaxing whine, and bobbed her neck. "It's a fine stimulant and soothing to the nerves."

June took the fragile glass in her hand. Its sheer beauty had won her. She inhaled daintily. The fragrance was most appealing. She looked at it again and smiled. She did feel faint and weak. She lifted the glass to her lips, and the tip of her tongue caught the delicious flavor. Suddenly, as she tilted the glass to drink, she caught the pallid eyes of the stewardess fixed eagerly upon her. The woman's mouth was half open, and she was breathing hard.

With a flash of intuition June jerked her lips from the glass and threw it, crashing and splintering, into the fireplace.

"Why, dearie!" exclaimed the stewardess, and in great agitation she pushed a button at the side of the mantel.

June's eyelashes lowered for an instant, and her lips set; then quietly she went into the little blue boudoir and sat thoughtfully upon the daintily upholstered settee.

The steward came pompously in.

"Well, you've done it again, you!" he growled as he surveyed the splintered fragments of the delicate Venetian glass.

"No, Percy," whined the woman and glared toward the boudoir door with her pallid eyes. She jerked her thumb in that direction, and then she winked. "That's you," snarled Wilkins. "You always say it's a guest."

"How much?" whispered the woman in a sibilant hiss, which carried as it was intended to do.

"Them glasses is $12 apiece, and it'll be taken from your wages. That comes out of my pocket!"

June bit her lips. Twelve dollars! It was a lot of money to a girl who had found dollars coming slowly and independence hard to win, but she picked up her purse. After all, she had no proof that the woman meant anything but kindness.

"Is this breakage charged against you?" asked June.

"Why, yes, dearie." A snifle went with the whine.

"How much will it cost you?"

"Twelve dollars!" Snifle. "But it's all a part of our job, so never mind, dearie."

"I do not wish you to lose the money," and quite thoughtfully June counted $12 from her slender store. She added another for the customary tip and gave one to the man, and they thanked her most obsequiously. As June returned to the boudoir their suppressed voices broke out again.

"No," protested the woman in that whining hiss; "that's my money—the dollar's mine, anyhow."

"Nothing yours except what I give you," stated Percy Wilkins gruffly. "That's the law, and you know it. Clean up that mess, you," and he left the room.

The woman's whining mumble could be heard all the while she was cleaning up the fireplace. She was going when June returned to the stateroom, but on the floor near the door was a yellow leather bound blank book, its side worn like glass from the constant friction of a pocket. June picked it up, and opened it with idle curiosity. On the first inside page, at the top, was the big scrawled word "From." At the top of the opposite page was the word "To." The first item on the "From" page was dated four years back.

"From Sallie Fish, wedding portion—2,000 pounds."

Beneath this was the item—

"Savings, Percy Wilkins—162 pounds."

On the opposite page the first entry was:

"Bookings to the States."

"Percy and Sally Wilkins, 22 pounds."

After that the entries were all in dollars. On the "From" side they were chiefly the wages of Percy Wilkins and Sally Fish Wilkins, for they had apparently gone into private service immediately. On the "To" side, which represented the expenditures, there were very few entries, but they were interesting. In the four years the woman had had four cheap dresses besides her uniforms and very scant accessories. The last entry among the receipts was June's $14 under the head of "Tips." On that page the book showed an item, "Banked to the credit of P. Wilkins, $12,000."

And it all belonged to the man, every penny. If the woman had anything it was a gift, no matter what she brought to the man on her marriage nor what she had earned since! It seemed universal, this condition.

A startling thought came to June. Suppose she acquired her independence, suppose she earned her own money, so that she could go to Ned, asking from him nothing but love in return for her love, would he own what she had earned? If so, what would become of the principle for which she had run away? She paled at that thought, and then she laughed. She did not know the law in this matter, but she knew Ned. Dear Ned! She hunted her handkerchief in a hurry.

CHAPTER III.

THE arrival of an envelope by messenger rendered unnecessary the immediate need of police aid for the Moore family.

With fingers which trembled in spite of his habitual control, the father of June opened the telegram and read this strange message:

I am sorry I had a certain party tied and lost in Hunter's woods. Please and him and tell him I am sorry. I am going to join our darling. I will protect her until we meet again, when all will be happy. Your faithful MARIE.

New plans were made accordingly. On the dock against which rocked and grated the swift little motorboat Swiftly, Silently, June Gained the Deck.

Flash the lonely overcoat and cap pursued their almost imperceptible way. A touring car stopped on the street up the hill.

"It is cold, my friend, is it not?" called Henri as he rushed forward, bottle in hand. "Shall we warm ourselves—yes?"

"Yep," rolled up the somber voice, with frosty cordiality, and the neck of the bottle disappeared in the slit of the overcoat collar.

"The motor tender from the Hilarity—it is not yet returned, eh?"

"Nope."

"Voila!" Henri is even cheerful as he races back up the dock. "I shall return, my friend Monsieur Frappe."

As Henri jumps into his car a dim, fat figure slinks out of the shadows and hops on behind.

Left alone momentarily, June threw open the door which she had just locked and dashed back along the gangway toward the pantry. At the end of the passage she found a companionway which led her up to the deck. She rushed forward to the prow, taking in at a glance that they were far from shore and in the open water. The distant lights glowed dimly through the mist, but just ahead of her, on the port side, bore down the red and green lights of a tug.

"Aho!" she cried, lifting her hands to her mouth like a megaphone. "Aho!" she s-reamed.

Strong arms seized her—the heavy jawed officer she had seen as she had come on board. Two others came running up, Edwards and Cunningham. Close behind were Tommy Thomas and Mrs. Villard, the former laughing, the latter panic stricken. A handkerchief was pressed against her mouth, and the tug flashed by.

It was Edwards and Cunningham who dragged June down into the crimson and gold salon, and as June was jostled in the first thing she saw was the dark, handsome face of Gilbert Blye! He was standing at the portable buffet, quietly drinking a glass of wine!

P. Wilkins and wife came running in, and Edwards, panting, his heavy lips parted in a half snarl and half grin, released his hold on June.

"Look her up," he ordered and joined Blye at the buffet. Blye lifted his glass, suavely smiling, as June, now unresisting, was led away.

Inside her stateroom June locked her door and at the same time heard it bolted from the outside.

On the dock the overcoat and cap watched the figure of Henri with drowsy interest; also a short, thick figure asked, with stiff lips,

"Didn't I tell you before to hike?"

husked the warm steam of breath.

"Get off the dock." "The beautiful little motorboat!" interrupted Henri, with ingratiating enthusiasm. "My friend M. Flambeau, would it not be possible?"

"Nope."

"Voila!" Henri was quite cheerful.

"I shall return again, my friend Frappe."

Henri was just starting his car and the short, thick figure had just slunk out of the shadows to hop on behind when the overcoat and cap sat on the edge of the dock, with their feet dangling toward the water.

"Ah!" breathed Henri to the stiff figure beside him. "At last it arrived. We shall wait!"

"Is there any left?" husked a voice.

"Pardon," abjectly apologized Henri, "a thousand pardons, Mlle. Marie." And he produced a fresh bottle.

The thick, short figure slinking back into the shadows wiped its lips with its tongue and shivered.

Dawn—slowly the chill, gray mist which lay upon the river began to clear.

"Voila," cracked the voice of Henri, but the tone was cheerful still. "He sleeps!"

It was true. The overcoat and cap, after hobbling and swaying dangerously over the water's edge for hour after hour, had at last stretched out on the dock for the slumber due to a night watchman who was thoroughly at ease and thoroughly warm.

Henri and Marie, with all the mental effect of stealthiness, sprang into the swift looking little motorboat.

A short, thick figure came painfully waddling out on the dock and shook the overcoat. The cap wobbled.

"Hey!" This was from the short, thick figure, but the aperture through which the sound came was so stiff that the result was only a wheeze.

A snore came from the overcoat.

"Hey!" A punch, a kick, but a stiff kick which had no force.

"Ugh!" The grunt was from the night watchman.

"Well, you with the distillery breath, I tried to tell you all night, didn't I? Oh, get alive! This is Bill Wolf, the private detective, talking to you."

"Ugh!" The cap moved, but the overcoat was still asleep.

"They stole the Flash, I say, they!"

"The Flash!" The overcoat straightened. It rose. The cap stiffened its angle. The combination scrambled to its feet.

"They stole the Flash!"

"Stole it! Who?"

"Oh, who?" The tone was one of infinite contempt. "Why, the little pink whiskered guy and the bony dame! Stole it! And now where did they go?"

"The yacht—what's her name?" The overcoat and cap were still bery. The cap turned abruptly toward the hamper, on the adjoining dock, where the name stood out in blunt white letters, "Hilarity!" "The—"

"The Hilarity!" Bill Wolf stooped with his hands on his knees to stare at that information which had been in plain sight all night. "Me for a telephone. Gee, look at that boat go!"

Upon the swelling waves rode the Hilarity, and all on board of her, save the officers of the night and one other, were sound asleep.

That one was June Warner. She had noiselessly dressed herself in a yachting costume, and now she slowly removed a bar which held the sliding of a secret panel she had discovered in the wall of her cabin. Then she showed it to one side until the opening was large enough to admit her lithe, slender figure. She found herself in a stateroom faintly illumined by the glowing of the dawn, and in that room on a chair and still wearing the evening raiment of the night before, sat his head bent upon his shoulder, Orin Cunningham.

With a shudder of aversion June sped to the door of Cunningham's cabin and opened it. She passed through the salon. There on the bench stretched Tommy Thomas, one tapering arm bent over her head and her dainty slippers crossed in slumbersome ease.

Swiftly, silently, June gained the deck. Creeping close to the cabin she rounded the stern. The Hilarity had dropped anchor, and the landing stairs with their silken hand rail had been let down. At the platform below bed the motor tender.

Swiftly, silently, the runaway bride crept out and down the side of the yacht and dropped as noiselessly as the cat into the motorboat while the long pink fingers of the dawn swept athwart the yellowing sky.

With a thumping heart June started the motor, and at the sound Gilbert Blye's dark, handsome face appeared above the rail.

YOUNG MUSICIAN CAPTURES GOTHAM IN SHORT ORDER

MISS HARRIET RUSK, POPULAR YOUNG SOCIETY WOMAN OF ZANESVILLE WHO IS WELL KNOWN HERE, ACHIEVING FAME AS COMPOSER OF SONGS. FLATTERING WRITE-UP IN CLEVELAND NEWSPAPER.

Sunday's edition of the Cleveland Leader contained a sketch of the success which is being attained in an unique career by Miss Harriet Rusk, of Zanesville, sister of Mrs. Pearce Ballard, of this city and extremely popular in the younger society circles of Washington.

In part the article reads:
"Zanesville, O., is learning all the new steps. Fox trotting and one stepping are no longer mysteries to be only read of in the Sunday supplements. And it is all due to Zanesville's latest and perhaps only prodigy, Harriet Rusk, aged twenty-one, who danced and sang herself into the heart of New York in a sixteen week campaign.

"Not that Miss Rusk is merely a dancer, or even a singer. She is neither. She is more. She is a composer. Of course, she sings her own songs and dances her own music. But otherwise she belongs to the highly artistic and gifted class known as song writers.

Barely twenty-one years old, Miss Rusk entered on her musical career upon being graduated from Zanesville high school three years ago. She took a short course of instruction at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and then burst upon New York, where within a few weeks she was accepted into the upper class of Gotham's artistic set and was associated with Signor Scotti, Ina Claire, Emma Carus and others of musical renown.

But it was not without a struggle that Harriet achieved these Olympian heights. Arriving in the metropolis a stranger and friendless, she wearily tramped her way from one music publishing house to another and then back again before she won a glimpse of recognition.

Perhaps if Miss Rusk had not been gifted with the fatal beauty that so many pulchritudinous women are now trying to discredit in themselves, she would have remained an unknown and unhonored composer from the provinces. But Miss Rusk is pretty, very pretty.

Certainly, the bare words of her manuscripts and the cold signs of her compositions made no impression on the music publishers. But one day she met Alfred Bryan, a well-known song writer, whose "I'm On the Way to Mandalay" has been trilled around the world and whose "Peg o' My Heart" has been sung wherever English is popular. Mr. Bryan can remember days of his own when he tramped the streets between music publishing houses. He became interested in Miss Rusk and invited her to sing some of her songs for him.

Miss Rusk was heard and Bryan was conquered. So impressed was the veteran music writer with the young girl's work that he immediately offered to collaborate with her, and "Daisy Went and Told on Me" was the result of their joint work.

The Zanesville girl's next success was in collaboration with James Kendis, manager of a music publishing house of his own. Together Kendis and Miss Rusk wrote "Linda Lee." Later he accepted for publication a song "I Want to Spoon on a Southern Moon," both the words and music of which were written by Miss Rusk.

Not four months in New York, so attractive was the Zanesville girl, that she received offers to go on the stage, both in vaudeville and in musical comedy.

But she declined all such offers, preferring to devote her time to writing songs.

After sixteen weeks in New York city, Miss Rusk returned to Zanesville, where she is spending her time composing songs and teaching the late dances. Which explains a great deal why Zanesville is becoming so devoted to the modern steps.

At the age of seven she began taking music lessons and now, besides being an accomplished singer and dancer, is a talented musician. She plays both by ear and note and is so versatile that improvising is easy for her. Once, when in New York, she was invited to a benefit at which two of the Vernon Castle instructors were to appear. The accompanist failed to show up and Miss Rusk's offer to sit at the piano was accepted. She improvised while the Castle instructors danced the fox trot, maxixe and tango, the Zanesville girl never once missing the motion of the difficult music.

Zanesville first heard of its girl musical prodigy when she was graduated from the high school in 1912. Harriet wrote the class song and that song is still one of the proudest memories of Z. H. S. Later she attracted state-wide attention by winning the prize for the best football song submitted to Ohio university at Athens for the college song book.

With these initial honors she assailed New York, stopping at the Studio Club, an institution which houses many struggling young feminine geniuses on their arrival in the great city.

So it looks as if this same pottery town had furnished a new celebrity to this staid world. Miss Rusk herself attributes her success to her rearing in the Muskingum valley, which has produced such well known Americans as Howard Chandler Christy, James Ball Naylor and Charles Gebeles.

Now, Zanesville is somewhat inclined to look askance at her sons and daughters who go away to success and return to inflict their worldly airs and metropolitan clothes on their native town, but not toward Harriet Rusk. She returned the same pretty, wholesome, ingenious girl she departed, and all Zanesville is taking her to their arms—the men figuratively, of course.

She is the daughter of A. P. Rusk, of the Clarendon hotel, and enjoys entry in the best musical and social circles. But all Zanesville now is convinced that she has not long to wait to receive recognition as "the well-known and popular song writer."
